Huge success for Padres and R.J. Donovan at 2nd annual Law Enforcement Night

More than 50 law enforcement agencies from around San Diego, including Richard J. Donovan Correctional Facility (RJD), attended the second annual San Diego Padres Law Enforcement Appreciation Night. The April 9 game was against the Los Angeles Dodgers.

RJD's Sgt. Corey Moore won the competition among the law enforcement personnel to sing the national anthem. Jade Morris, another RJD employee, was selected as the sign language representative.

Local law enforcement was recognized on the field prior to the game. In addition, Various K-9 units, including RJD's canine officers Scout and Klippe with Correctional Officers M. Fredrick and A. Alanis, marched on the field along with motorcycles, ATVs, and bicycles.

This year's law enforcement night netted more than $30,000, which will benefit local law enforcement charities.

CDCR Strategic Offender Management System launched at women's prisons

CDCR has launched the Strategic Offender Management System (SOMS) software at the three California women's institutions — Central California Women's Facility, Valley State Prison for Women and California Institution for Women — and various headquarters locations. SOMS will replace more than 40 aging electronic and paper systems that are becoming increasingly difficult and costly to maintain.

For the first time in CDCR history the department will have a unified, automated system for tracking offender assessments, case management plans, and other data. This will allow custody and program staff to better manage the offender population, which should lead to reduced recidivism.

This initial release includes automation of the inmate intake, movement and count processes. CDCR expects to deploy SOMS to men's adult institutions in the summer of 2011. Additional information-sharing capacity will be implemented at all institutions over the next two years.
